Meet the Artists

Sarah Grigg

Sarah Grigg is an award-winning experimental performer, social artist and composer for film and dance. Much of her work now also explores the social science of the creative process, in order to engage the creative potential of individuals and communities.

Sarah holds an M.F.A. in Performance as Research from the University of California, Davis, and a Ph.D. in Performance Studies with an emphasis in audiovisual media. She has performed extensively in the United States and internationally, including in Japan, Canada, Brazil, and the United Kingdom. Sarah's work has been recognized with several ADDY Awards. In recent years, she worked on a business biography and ghost wrote on the behalf of a U.S. President. She has also worked on a book about hunting, essays and her commercial work has been recognized with a Golden Winner at the Telly Awards. Sarah has also published several books, including a book covering the sweeping history of two Montana ranches. Her work has been exhibited in various galleries and venues, including at the Taft-Nicholson Center for the Arts in Idaho. Sarah received her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho. Sarah obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied acting and directing at the University of the Arts and Theatre School, and her graduate degree at the University of Georgia Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources, with field work in Namibia. She has worked in the fields of environmental journalism, ranching and ecotourism economies led her to complete a graduate degree in environmental journalism. From there, she worked for the Henry's Fork Foundation in Ashton, Idaho.